LRP 'can-do' attitude stands out 14 Wing command checks in on Op Impact deployment

Managing editor

14 Wing Greenwood command team members were part of a recent visit to Canadian Armed Forces' overseas operations, including Lithuania and Kuwait, where about 80 14 Wing personnel are deployed.

Commander Colonel Iain Huddleston and Wing Chief Warrant Officer Pierrot Jetté accompanied Major General David Wheeler, Chief Warrant Officer Mike Scarcella and Honorary Colonel Barry Rempel of 1 Canadian Air Division; Colonel Dave Lowthian and Chief Warrant Officer Darcy Elder of 8 Wing and Chief Warrant Officer Bob Viel of 4 Wing.

December 29, the envoy arrived in Lithuania to visit the Baltic Air Policing Air Task Force and attend the handover ceremony from the Canadian CF18 detachment and Portuguese colleagues to the incoming Italian and Polish detachments.

The group then headed for Kuwait, arriving late New Year's Eve, in time to enjoy the hospitality of the Air Task Force – Iraq (ATF-I) commander, Colonel Eric Kenny, and ring in the new year watching the Canada versus United States World Junior hockey game at Canada House at Camp Patrice Vincent.

New Year's Day was all business, as the visit was a formal opportunity to see Operation Impact action in support of the Middle East Stabilization Force, the multinational coalition against the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant in the Republic of Iraq. The CAF command group toured the ATF lines, watched a CF18 recovery and launch and were briefed on the mission to date. A separate visit to the CC150T Polaris airfield was then followed by travel to the location of 14 Wing's own long range patrol deployment, "Camp Canada."

"The team welcomed us in style," Huddleston says. "We were fortunate enough to be there at a time when four CP140M Auroras were in-theatre at the same time, with members of 405, 407 (from 19 Wing) and 14 Air Maintenance squadrons; Maritime Proving and Evaluation Unit and Wing Logistics & Engineering on hand. The aircraft and crews were lined up when we arrived and we had a unique opportunity to take an excellent group photo with the four deployed aircraft and our commander."

Wheeler and the Greenwood command team visited the detachment, toured the newly-upgraded CP140M iBLOS aircraft and received a briefing on the contributions the detachment has made over the last two months to the ATF-I mission.

After the Wheeler's departure, Huddleston and Jetté remained with the detachment another five days, taking the opportunity to fly on two operational missions.

"We got a full sense of the mission and the LRP Detachment's part in it and, above all, engaged with our deployed members and saw the great job that they are doing overseas," Huddleston says.

"The LRP team is incredibly focussed and motivated. They have come together as a tight knit team and are prosecuting the mission with significant success. While we were there, we saw how they had adapted to and overcome the many challenges of the deployment location - even creating new procedures which we will be able to bring home to improve domestic operations. To date, they have not missed a mission, though they have certainly faced complex maintenance issues which have resulted in delayed take-offs."

The new iBLOS capability was deployed on aircraft 115 in early January, the culmination of two months' work on an incredibly compressed timeline by a large number of organizations and civilian companies. 14 Wing's contribution was made primarily by MPEU, 14 SES and 14 AMS units; with individual team members working many long hours to ensure the capability deployed on time. Now, with the help of a small group of air and ground crew from MPEU, the LRP Det is beginning to employ the capability in-theatre. This allows them to send real-time information back to the Combined Air Operations Centre while airborne.

On the ground, day-to-day operations and life in Camp Canada appear to be hitting their stride. Huddleston and Jetté toured both the ATF-I and Joint Task Force - Iraq compounds and met with the respective commanders, Kenny and Brigadier General Dan Constable. The camp is well appointed, but separated by a few kilometres from both the mess halls and the flight line. The visitors were impressed with the operations setup and with the Deployed Mission Support Capability, unique to the LRP force and critical in ensuring the flow of information from the aircraft and mission to those who need it, external to the detachment. A few amenities - a gym, a small PX, a rink and a coffee shop - are also located in camp for personnel.

"The detachment's focus and personnel's motivation to accomplish the mission is excellent, and their ability to make the best of their living area by taking advantage of everything within their grasp and turning it into a positive - from a mini gym to after-hours activities - greatly contributes to the impressively high morale and provides some well-deserved welfare activities."

Huddleston is pleased to pass along the LRP team is being recognized within the ATF-I, and across the coalition, for its "can-do attitude" and the contribution it is making to the mission.

"The chief and I could not have been prouder."

Maintaining Aurora operational success

Unit public affairs representative,
Long Range Patrol Detachment, Operation Impact

Effective ground support is essential to achieving mission success during Operation Impact.

The Long Range Patrol (LRP) Detachment Maintenance Flight is integral to providing serviceable CP140 Aurora aircraft to conduct intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance (ISR) missions over Iraq in support of Middle East Stabilization Force missions against the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL).

After 30 sorties, the Maintenance Flight has achieved excellent mission success with a high serviceability rate over November and December. The combined team from 14 Wing Greenwood, and 19 Wing Comox has been the cornerstone for long-range patrol operations out of Kuwait and an exceptional example of an organized, trained, and combat-ready unit within Air Task Force-Iraq. Comprised of aircraft maintenance technicians, supply technicians, a maintenance superintendent and an aerospace engineering officer, this flight has already made its mark in theatre.

The first rotation of a deployment is often the most challenging period of any air operation. It is the time when critical maintenance areas are established, equipment is flown into theatre, and basic processes in a deployed environment are developed and implemented, all while maintaining mission focus in the face of time pressures and limited resources.

"Even though the days are long, I know the work I am doing here will help other techs succeed," says a long-range patrol maintenance technician from 14 Wing. "We come to work knowing that we are contributing to this mission and it gives us a real sense of purpose and pride."

This type of mission focus has been witnessed on multiple occasions. Early in November, an issue arose with a leaking aircraft oil tank. Experienced technicians came up with a solution that took only a few hours permitting the aircrew to fly their mission. In another case, the outstanding teamwork of technicians enabled them to replace the electro-optical/infrared camera in only 70 minutes – a job that can take several hours under normal conditions.

the team so highly motivated and working together in order to make the mission happen."

While the CP140 Aurora offers an outstanding ISR platform to the Middle East Stabilization Force coalition, this capability is dependent on the quality of the ground support. As is the mantra in the Long Range Patrol Detachment, "There is no divide between maintenance and operations. Maintenance is operations." Achieving mission success is the proof, and it is all due to long-range patrol maintenance technicians' hard work.

Aurora sorties add to mission work

Operation Impact is the Canadian Armed Forces' support to the Middle East Stabilization Force – the multinational coalition against the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) in the Republic of Iraq.

As of January 15, Air Task Force-Iraq conducted 335 sorties, including 241 by CF188 Hornet fighter jets, 57 by CC150T Polaris aerial refuellers, delivering some 3,117,000 pounds of fuel to coalition aircraft; and 64 CP140 Aurora aircraft reconnaissance missions.

January 18, while taking part in coalition missions in support of Iraqi security forces ground operations northwest of Mosul, CF188 Hornets successfully struck an ISIL fighting position by using precision guided munitions.

January 16, while taking part in coalition missions in support of Iraqi security forces ground operations, CF188 Hornets conducted an airstrike northeast of Mosul and another in the vicinity of Sinjar, where ISIL fighting positions were successfully struck by using precision guided munitions.

A CP140 Aurora aircraft awaits its next mission in Kuwait.

Operation Impact, DND

OP Impact, from a first officer perspective

A First Officer of the Long Range Patrol Detachment, Operation Impact

It's surprising how quickly world events can sneak up on you. I, like many Canadians, had been tracking events in the Middle East for months without a thought of how it might specifically affect me. I was just recently married, so my mind was pleasantly occupied with getting used to wedded life. It wasn't until

I attempted to book leave for my honeymoon, and was told to wait, I realized world events were about to become very real for me. I was told to get ready to deploy.

As time went on, announcements and debates took place in Parliament. Plans began to solidify and our squadron prepared to join the fight in Iraq. I had only six months of operational experience on squadron; one of the most junior first officers in the long range patrol (LRP) fleet. I had less than 300 flying hours under my belt and had participated in only one major exercise, focused on anti-submarine warfare.

For many others and me, a drastic shift in mindset and mission focus was coming. By the time the Government of Canada had formally ordered the mission, our crews were identified and the preparation and training were underway in earnest for the new challenge.

I was impressed by the hard work and flexibility of our crews and support staff at 14 Wing Greenwood, as we trained over long days, including weekends and Thanksgiving, to ensure we were as prepared as possible to deploy. This also meant a few hard weeks of theatre and mission-specific training, as well as more routine readiness training, such as refresher training on the pistol and rifle.

What challenges did I expect? I wondered if we would be under fire often, how dangerous the country in which we would be based would be and how difficult the heat, sand and dust would be to endure.

The challenges we have faced in actuality have proven to be somewhat different. Initially, there were the challenges that always accompany deploying on the initial rotations. We were the first on the ground; things were not fully set up when we arrived. I learned we were the key element required to transition a war zone into a smooth operation. Added to the hard work required of the first rotation, it is difficult to be away from family at the best of times, and especially during the holidays. The heat has proven to be quite mild in the fall and winter; with temperatures similar to a mild summer day back in Canada. However, at night, the temperature dips down to near zero quite often, so many of us wish we had brought more warm clothing.

What we didn't expect was the challenge of an aggressive flying schedule. Working 18 to 20 hour days, every other day, means fatigue is something we constantly need to be aware of. On top of this, our flights are not always at the same time each day, so our sleep patterns are required to change often - and quickly. Given the long work days, it is important we remain alert for signs of fatigue, both in ourselves and with our fellow crew mates.

Beyond the fatigue factor, one of the largest challenges is remaining motivated and effective day in and day out. Back home, there are normal daily life distractions of family, friends, hobbies and even simple errands that break up your day and take your mind off work. Here, there are no such distractions. As a result, the daily routine can develop into a daily grind if you're not careful.

As a less-experienced member of the crew, I've learned it is important to keep the larger operational picture in mind.

While being the "unblinking eye" is sometimes unglamorous, this is the task at hand, and it is an important role to fill for the coalition. Our intelligence section and chain-of-command do a great job of keeping us informed on what we, as a coalition, are achieving. This goes a long way toward keeping us motivated and eager to stay in the fight.

So how do we overcome these challenges? The logistical and operational challenges that go with being first on the ground in theatre are immense and, despite some moments that proved frustrating, Air Task Force-Iraq has worked quickly through this phase and is having success.

In the LRP detachment, one of the primary ways many of us relieve stress is to ramp up our physical training. Both the Joint Task Force and the Air Task Force are holding fitness challenges. Many of us work out daily. It helps to pass the time and keep us in a good mindset, which goes hand-in-hand with helping us shift our sleep schedules.

Motivation comes from many sources. For many of us, the ability we have here to keep in regular touch with our families has been an immense morale boost.

We are now through the early months of our deployment. The remaining months will be full of challenges, but the Air Task Force and the LRP detachment have the tools to overcome them. We are determined to fly over Iraq, to do our part to improve stability in the region and stop the so-called Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant. And, before long, we will return home to our loved ones.

January 9, Captain Mathieu Kuhn (centre), 404 Squadron flight safety officer, received 14 Wing Greenwood's new Flight Safety Coin from 14 Wing Commander Colonel Iain Huddleston (left), as 404 Squadron Commanding Officer Lieutenant-Colonel David Proteau looks on.

Submitted

Flight safety coin marks Kuhn's effort

In the past, the Flight Safety (FS) program only had awards for individuals that dealt with flight safety occurrences (for "professionalism" and "good show"), but nothing recognizing to the program itself – so, the Flight Safety Coin was recently instituted.

The coin is now available to recognize a notable contribution to the FS program by an individual's particular actions or noteworthy dedication. It conveys the Director Flight Safety's (DFS) appreciation to a worthy recipient, who exemplifies the values of the FS program. As such, all recipients of any FS award like the Good Show, For Pro and DFS Commendation; will automatically be handed a FS coin. The coin will also be awarded by DFS to recipients of units of wing FS for related recognitions.

Captain Mathieu Kuhn, 404 Squadron flight safety officer, was one of the first recipients January 9 of the new FS coin for his unwavering dedication to the flight safety program here at 14 Wing Greenwood. Kuhn's dedication and devotion is unmatched by his peers. He continuously keeps the chain of command and other squadron personnel apprised of recent FS events, occurrences and, most importantly, trending. Considering this period of heavy operations tempo, his efforts cannot be over emphasized. Whether discussing FS events at morning brief or delivering a presentation on an issue or concern during a ground training day, Kuhn has a willingness to get the FS message out.

Considering his workload as tactical cell lead and as crew commander for the upcoming squadron deployment as part of Operation Impact, it is remarkable Kuhn is able and willing to devote so much of his time to this secondary duty, one he obviously has a deep passion for.

An evolving chaplaincy

Changes to Canadian Armed Forces regulations regarding Chaplain Services have recently come into effect (Chapter 33 of the Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Canadian Forces).

Canadian Armed Forces (CAF) chaplains provide for the religious, spiritual and moral well-being of all CAF members and their families, regardless of their religion, spiritual affiliation or beliefs. These chaplains represent more than 20 different Christian denominations, as well as the Jewish and Muslim faiths.

Due to the tremendous change and diversification experienced by the Royal Canadian Chaplain Service since the last version of QR&O Chapter 33 (amended in 2006), these changes were necessary to ensure this multi-faith reality is properly reflected in CAF policy. Updating this QR&O will allow the Royal Canadian Chaplain Service to meet current and future requirements of the CAF, which include supporting members and their families, as well as providing advice to the chain of command on matters such as morale and ethics. Whether in times of crisis or otherwise, a strong personal connection is essential to providing the spiritual support that military members and their families may require.

The newly updated QR&O Chapter 33 – Chaplain Services, may be found online.

Une aumônerie en pleine évolution

Des amendements sont entrés en vigueur récemment en ce qui a trait aux règlements des FAC applicables aux Services de l'Aumônerie (Chapitre 33 des Ordonnances et règlements royaux applicables aux Forces canadiennes).

Les aumôniers des Forces armées canadiennes (FAC) veillent au bien-être religieux, spirituel et moral des militaires des FAC et des membres de leur famille, sans égard à leurs croyances ou à leur appartenance religieuse ou spirituelle. Ces aumôniers représentent plus de vingt groupes confessionnels chrétiens, de même que les confessions juive et musulmane.

En raison des énormes changements et de la grande diversification vécus par le Service de l'Aumônerie royale du Canada depuis la publication de la dernière version du chapitre 33 des ORFC (amendés en 2006), ces amendements étaient devenus nécessaires pour veiller à ce que cette réalité multiconfessionnelle soit bien prise en compte dans les politiques des FAC. La mise à jour de ces ORFC permet-tra au Service de l'Aumônerie royale du Canada de répondre aux besoins actuels et futurs des FAC, c'est-à-dire soutenir les militaires et les membres de leur famille, ainsi que conseiller la chaîne de commandement sur des questions d'ordre moral et éthique. Que ce soit en temps de crise ou non, il est essentiel d'établir un lien solide pour être en mesure d'offrir le soutien spirituel dont peuvent avoir besoin les militaires et les membres de leur famille.

La nouvelle version du chapitre 33 des ORFC est disponible en ligne.

Eye on halocarbons

Wing updating inventory of highly common gas-based equipment

Sara Keddy,
Managing editor

Your lunch, your work-space ventilation unit, the building's heat pump – all could, and likely do, contain halocarbons. That's something federal regulations demand be tracked.

14 Wing Greenwood maintains a Wing Standing Order requiring halocarbon equipment be procured through Wing Construction Engineering – WSO 4.1.1, specifically paragraph 15(a).

"From what we often see around the wing, we suspect not everyone complies with this requirement when it comes to bar fridges, for example. If and when we do a survey and inventory check here at Greenwood, it may highlight this problem, and we may have to enforce the WSO more diligently," says Steve Sauveur, 14 Wing Greenwood's environment officer.

Taking a step in that direction, Sauveur and Ken Smiley, working with Defence Construction Canada, have undertaken a survey of halocarbon equipment at 5th Canadian Division Training Centre Aldershot Aldershot. Their inventory will be turned into 14 Wing's Refrigeration and Mechanical shop for follow-up investigation, any removal action and as a more current set of information.

"The basis of the regulation is, halocarbons are ozone depleting," says Smiley.

He's moving building to building at Aldershot, looking for equipment that contains halocarbons – water coolers, mini fridges, heat pumps, rooftop ventilation systems, fridges and freezers – "We're updating everything, as it's been many years since it was done fully. When we're done, the RM shop will have a list of everything with halocarbons in it.

Smiley is also tagging equipment he finds, adding a tracking number to go along with it in the Department of National Defence's halocarbon management system.

"You can't be throwing these things out," Sauveur says. Halocarbon-based equipment must be properly degassed: the inventory, tracking and a general awareness campaign about the WSO will help ensure that happens.

"We want to do the same process at 14 Wing, but the scale is just so much bigger than Aldershot. We'll do our first work here, and then work with the RM shop in Greenwood on the next level."

Ken Smiley, working with Defence Construction Canada, checks the specs on a common lunchroom fridge – a potential source of regulated halocarbons – at Camp Aldershot. 14 Wing's Refrigeration and Mechanical shop is leading the inventory at Aldershot, before lining up a similar project at Greenwood.

Online course offers radiation safety awareness course

Several misconceptions exist about ionizing radiation and nuclear safety within the Department of National Defence and Canadian Armed Forces community, and the general public. Events surrounding the Fukushima nuclear power plant accident in Japan highlight society's general misunderstanding of the impact of potential exposure to ionizing radiation.

To assist DND and CAF personnel in understanding the risks associated with exposure to ionizing radiation, Director Nuclear Safety (DN Safe) has released an online Radiation Safety Awareness (RSA) course to generate basic awareness of ionizing radiation, introduce the types of practices in DND and the CAF that use ionizing radiation and explain the role of departmental radiation safety officers in helping to manage the overall nuclear safety program.

The RSA course is accessible via the Defence Learning Network and is open to all DND and CAF personnel (it takes about one to two hours to complete). If you have any questions or concerns with regards to radiation safety, contact your unit radiation safety officer or Wing Radiation Safety Officer Sergeant Greg Smith, 902-765-1494 local 5007. Additional information regarding the 14 Wing Radiation Safety program may be found on the 14 Wing splash page at greenwood.mil.ca/cms/PolicyPrograms/SafetyPrograms/Radiation-SafetyProgramme.aspx.

Cours en ligne sur la sensibilisation à la radioprotection

Plusieurs idées fausses sur les rayonnements ionisants et la sûreté nucléaire existent au sein de la communauté du ministère de la Défense nationale et des Forces armées canadiennes, et de la population en général. Les événements ayant entouré l'accident de la centrale nucléaire de Fukushima, au Japon, ont permis de mettre en lumière la méconnaissance générale de la société en ce qui a trait aux conséquences d'une éventuelle exposition aux rayonnements ionisants.

Pour aider le personnel du MDN et des FAC à mieux comprendre les risques liés à l'exposition aux rayonnements ionisants, le Directeur - Sûreté nucléaire (D Sûr N) offre un cours en ligne intitulé « Sensibilisation à la radioprotection », qui vise notamment les objectifs suivants : fournir des connaissances de base sur les rayonnements ionisants, expliquer les diverses pratiques en cours au sein du MDN et des FAC qui font appel à des rayonnements ionisants et définir le rôle des officiers de radioprotection (O Rad) dans la gestion de l'ensemble du programme de sûreté nucléaire.

Le cours de sensibilisation à la radioprotection est offert par le Réseau d'apprentissage de la Défense (RAD) à tous les membres du personnel du MDN et des FAC. Il faut prévoir une à deux heures pour compléter le cours. Si vous avez des questions ou des préoccupations concernant la radioprotection, veuillez communiquer avec l'officier de radioprotection de votre unité ou avec l'officier de radioprotection de l'escadre, le sergent Greg Smith, au 902-765-1494 poste 5007. Pour de plus amples renseignements sur le Programme de radioprotection de la 14e Escadre, consultez la page d'entrée de la 14e Escadre à l'adresse suivante : greenwood.mil.ca/cms/PolicyPrograms/SafetyPrograms/RadiationSafetyProgramme.aspx (en anglais seulement)

Fun By The Numbers

Here's How It Works: Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

TAURUS - Apr 21/May 21
Your desires make it seem like anything is within reach this week, Taurus. You may have to work a little harder to achieve your goals, but hard work is its own reward.

CANCER - Jun 22/Jul 22
Cancer, try to avoid stretching yourself too thin in the coming weeks. Your ambition and energy are at an all-time high, but if you do not slow down, you can easily get burnt out.
